Dear,

I write in connection with your request for information dated 16th October 2021 concerning the Christopher Halliwell case.

I am required by the Freedom of Information Act 2000 to handle all requests in a manner that is blind as to the identity and motives of the requestor. Any information released as a response to a request is regarded as being published and therefore in the public domain without caveat.

Your request for information has now been considered and I am not obliged to supply the information you have requested.

You wrote:

I am asking for the sixty items found at the pond site at Hilldrop Lane, Ramsbury in conjunction to double murderer Christopher Halliwell to be placed in the public domain. If this information cannot be released, I would like to know why this is the case?

Our response:

The information that you have requested is exempt by virtue of the following exemptions:

Section 30(1) – Investigations

Section 38(1) – Health and Safety

Sections 30 and 38 are prejudice based and qualified exemptions, therefore the harm (prejudice) in disclosure should be evidenced and the public interest given.

Overall Harm

Although every effort should be made to release information under the Freedom of Information Act, to disclose this type of information would prejudice any investigations, whether current or future. Though there is a large public interest in the transparency of policing, especially in relation to a high profile and highly emotive investigation, this is countered by the need to protect any current or future investigations into this case.

Furthermore, there is a very strong public interest in safeguarding the integrity of police investigations, especially regarding a very serious and high-profile case. This, in turn, would reassure the public that the police are highly secure and would not disclose any information to the world, not just the requester, which may jeopardise any investigation.

Finally, the disclosure of this information would cause great emotional and mental distress onto the family and friends of Becky Godden-Edwards and Sian O'Callaghan.

Public Interest Considerations – Section 30

Factors favouring Disclosure –

The disclosure of this information would lead to a better-informed public and promote trust by demonstrating openness, transparency and accountability. This is especially important in relation to high profile and emotive cases.

Factors against Disclosure –

Disclosing this information would provide to the world, not just the requester, information which may prejudice current or future investigations into a high-profile case. This would highlight that Wiltshire Police does not take the security and integrity of its investigations seriously, which would cause a large drop in public confidence. This would lead to people not wanting to report incidents and engage with police investigations.

Public Interest Considerations – Section 38

Factors favouring Disclosure –

Disclosing this information would lead to a better-informed public especially in relation to a high-profile offender and emotive investigation. This would demonstrate that Wiltshire Police is as open and transparent as possible.

Factors against Disclosure –

To disclose this information would cause a large amount of mental and emotive distress to the family and friends of the victims. Wiltshire Police will not disclose information if it would cause harm, no matter physical, emotive or mental to victims of crime or members of the public.

Furthermore, disclosure of this information would lead to a large amount of media attention and spotlight being placed onto the family and friends of the victims, which would harm their wellbeing. There is a large public interest in ensuring that families and friends of victims are safeguarded and not caused any further harm by the police via a disclosure into the public domain.

Balance Test

The above points highlight both the merits and issues with disclosing the requested information in relation to your Freedom of Information request. Overall, the police service is charged with enforcing the law, preventing and detecting crime and protecting the communities we serve. Because of this, Wiltshire Police will not divulge any information if to do so would prejudice our investigative capabilities and/or cause any further harm or distress to victims of crime and members of the public.

The public interest is very largely in favour of non-disclosure for these reasons.

This would only be overridden in exceptional circumstances, which this Freedom of Information request is not.

Section 17 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 requires Wiltshire Police, when refusing to provide information (because the information is exempt) to provide you the applicant with a notice which: (a) states that fact, (b) specifies the exemption in question and (c) states (if that would not otherwise be apparent) why the exemption applies. In accordance with the Freedom of Information Act 2000 this letter acts as a Refusal Notice for those aspects of your request.

Exemptions applied:

Section 30(1) – Investigations

Section 38(1) – Health and Safety

I am satisfied that all the relevant information has been passed to me and been considered in the light of your request within the time constraints applicable under the legislation.

Wiltshire Police would like to thank you for the interest that you have shown in the Force.

Yours sincerely,

Kay Moore
