Dear,

I write in connection with your request for information dated 08/12/2026 concerning training materials used to train staff on protected characteristics.

I am required by the Freedom of Information Act 2000 to handle all requests in a manner that is blind as to the identity and motives of the requestor. Any information released as a response to a request is regarded as being published and therefore in the public domain without caveat.

Your request for information has now been considered and I am able to respond as follows.

You wrote with Response:

- 1) Please can you provided a copy of any training and info materials your service provides to staff to train them on the Equality Act 2010 and the protected characteristics.

The training materials for this subject include nationally owned College of Policing products and locally developed internal classroom resources. These are subject to intellectual property, licensing, and internal governance controls and are not intended for public disclosure.

Releasing them could risk undermining the rights of the content owners and the integrity and effectiveness of the internal training provision.

However, to support the response, a narrative description of the training provision and its scope is provided below.

All newly recruited officers and staff are required to complete the College of Policing online training on the Equality Act 2010. This covers Protected Characteristics, the Public Sector Equality Duty, Direct and Indirect Discrimination, Harassment and Victimisation, and provides an overview of Positive Action. Following the UK Supreme Court ruling of 16 April 2025, this product is currently under review by the College of Policing.

Keeping Wiltshire Safe

This is supplemented by classroom-based learning delivered as part of Initial Police Learning and leadership development programmes. These sessions cover the Equality Act 2010, Protected Characteristics, the Public Sector Equality Duty, Direct and Indirect Discrimination, Harassment and Victimisation, Positive Action, Equality Impact Assessments, and reasonable adjustments. They are delivered in a learning environment designed to promote inclusion, ethical decision-making, and application of these duties in policing practice, and signpost participants to internal support, including Staff Support Networks.

Leadership development provision includes structured delivery on these themes across multiple programmes designed to build inclusive leadership capability at all levels. This includes Foundations of Leadership, which is open to officers and staff regardless of whether they hold a formal leadership role, First Line Leaders for Sergeants and staff supervisors, and Sergeant-specific training. These programmes also explore the Force's Equality, Diversity and Inclusion vision and commitments and the latest Wiltshire Police Culture, Equality, Diversity and Inclusion Strategy 2025 to 2030.

Current delivery reflects the UK Supreme Court ruling of 16 April 2025 and incorporates Wiltshire Police Transgender Equality Guidance for Custody and Searches and the NPCC Interim Guidance on searching by transgender officers and employees and the searching of transgender detainees (2335-20205-npcc-interim-transgender-search-guidance-final.pdf). It is highlighted within training that this guidance is interim and that content will be updated to reflect the Equality and Human Rights Commission Code of Practice once approved by Parliament, or any further legal or policy developments.

Training for Police staff including PCSOs, DOs, and CCC call handlers includes the completion of the mandated online learning described above.

Furthermore for PCSOs there is a lesson which explains 'it is against the law to discriminate against someone because of one of the 9 protected characteristics'

The learners are then given a quiz to identify them and talk about them.

DOs and Custody Sgts have classroom learning where reference is made to the Equality Act as per below:

1.0 The powers and procedures in this Code must be used fairly, responsibly, with respect for the people to whom they apply and without unlawful discrimination.

Under the Equality Act 2010, section 149, when police forces must, in carrying out their functions, they also have a duty to have due regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation, to advance equality of opportunity between people who share a relevant protected characteristic and people who do not share it, and to take steps to foster good relations between those persons.

- 2) Please provide any training and info materials provided to staff covering gender critical beliefs, covered by the religion or belief protected characteristics, post-Forstater.

There are no standalone training or information materials that focus specifically on gender-critical beliefs or the Forstater judgment.

Relevant content is instead addressed within wider training on the Equality Act 2010, Protected Characteristics, and respectful workplace behaviours, particularly in relation to the religion or belief characteristic and freedom of expression.

All training is delivered in a way that connects to the Force values of courage, respect and empathy, and public service. In-depth classroom-based learning is designed to promote inclusion and to create a safe environment in which a range of lawful views and beliefs can be discussed, understood, and treated with respect, including beliefs protected under the religion or belief characteristic.

This approach is intended to support staff in navigating complex and sensitive issues in a way that is lawful, ethical, respectful, and consistent with the Code of Ethics and the Force's Equality, Diversity and Inclusion commitments.

Nothing is covered with regard to this topic for PCSOs, DOs, or CCC call handlers outside of wider equality training outlined above.

- 3) Please also provide any training and info materials provided to staff covering sex having always meant biological sex in law, per the Supreme Court's ruling.

There are no standalone training or information materials that focus solely on the Supreme Court's statutory interpretation of the meaning of "sex", "man" and "woman" within the Equality Act 2010.

This content is instead addressed within the wider legal and equality training described above. Current delivery includes facilitated exploration of the Supreme Court judgment, including the Justices' interpretation of the terms "sex", "man" and "woman" within the Equality Act 2010, and what this means for lawful and respectful practice.

This is positioned within broader learning on the Equality Act 2010, the Public Sector Equality Duty, and the need to balance competing rights, and is delivered in a way that supports understanding, reflection, and lawful application in policing contexts.

Nothing is covered with regard to this topic for PCSOs, DOs, or CCC call handlers outside of wider equality training outlined above.

I am satisfied that all the relevant information has been passed to me and been considered in the light of your request within the time constraints applicable under the legislation.

Wiltshire Police would like to thank you for the interest that you have shown in the Force.

Yours sincerely
