Dear XXXX,

I write in connection with your request for information dated 17th February regarding police stations.

I am required by the Freedom of Information Act 2000 to handle all requests in a manner that is blind as to the identity and motives of the requestor. Any information released as a response to a request is regarded as being published and therefore in the public domain without caveat.

Your request for information has now been considered, and I am able to respond as follows.

You wrote:

1. A list of all police stations in your force area/jurisdiction that have a counter open to members of the public.
2. A list of all police stations (or facilities from which police officers may be dispatched) in your force area/jurisdiction that do not have a counter open to members of the public.

I do not require any training facilities, vehicle hubs or logistical facilities to be included in these lists unless they are routinely used for dispatching police officers. Please include the full address including postcode for each police station listed.

Our response:
